The Sleep Company, a leading brand in the sleep tech industry, has gained recognition for its innovative sleep solutions that revolutionize the rest and comfort experience. Founded by Harshil Salot and his wife Priyanka in 2017, the brand's remarkable journey began with their personal quest for the perfect mattress. Today, The Sleep Company stands as the third-largest direct-to-consumer (D2C) brand in India, with a growing international presence and a vision to enhance sleep quality worldwide.

> "We immersed ourselves in studying the sleep tech industry, aiming to find the perfect mattress. Collaborating with retired DRDO scientist Dr. AK Tripathi, we developed the 'SmartGRID,' our patented technology that sets us apart," says Harshil Salot, Co-founder of The Sleep Company.

Expanding from a digital-first brand to omnichannel stalwarts, The Sleep Company has opened 30 stores within a year, catering to the increasing demand for high-quality sleep products. With India ranking as the second-most sleep-deprived country globally, the brand's mission is to make a difference in people's sleep experiences.

As part of its efforts to make the unorganized market more organized, The Sleep Company has contributed to the rise of the D2C sector. "We prioritize customer satisfaction and offer a 100-day trial period and free installation," says Salot. The brand also educates customers about the long-term health benefits of tech-enabled mattresses, driving the growth of the online sales sector.

Diverse Product Range and Continuous Innovation

The Sleep Company's product range includes SmartGRID mattresses, SmartGRID chairs, smart recliner beds, and sleep accessories. However, the brand doesn't plan to stop there. "We have a robust R&D team aggressively working on expanding our product portfolio," reveals Salot. The brand aims to move beyond mattresses, pillows, and beds, expanding into furnishings and extending the application of the SmartGRID technology to all seating solutions, such as gaming chairs.

One significant step towards empowerment and inclusivity is The Sleep Company's recently opened all-women store. "The opening of our all-women store reflects our dedication to supporting and uplifting women in our organization," explains Salot. The brand aims to open more such stores, expanding to other cities, as part of its commitment to gender diversity and empowering women.

SmartGRID Technology: Redefining Sleep Comfort

The SmartGRID technology remains the brand's biggest differentiator. "It represents the forefront of sleep technology innovation," Salot emphasizes. Unlike traditional mattresses, the SmartGRID technology combines softness for pressure point relief with the necessary firmness for back support. The 2500+ air channels ensure proper air circulation, preventing heat build-up during the night. The durability and no-partner disturbance technology further enhance the sleep experience.

> Looking ahead, The Sleep Company aims to reach the 100-store mark nationwide this year, with a vision to establish its brand globally. "In the next five years, we envision significant growth and expansion on a global scale," Salot asserts. The brand is focused on expanding its international presence and aims to tap into the global demand for high-quality sleep products.

Social Responsibility and Philanthropy

In addition to product innovation, The Sleep Company places great emphasis on sustainability, adopting eco-friendly materials and manufacturing practices to minimize its carbon footprint. The SmartGRID technology's durable design reduces waste by reducing the need for frequent replacements.

The Sleep Company actively engages in philanthropic initiatives focused on improving sleep health and well-being. It collaborates with sleep research institutions and organizations to raise awareness about the importance of quality sleep and supports programs that provide mattresses and sleep essentials to underprivileged communities.

Reshaping the Sleep Industry

As The Sleep Company continues to make strides in the sleep tech industry, it remains dedicated to transforming the way people sleep and rejuvenate their lives. With its innovative products, commitment to customer satisfaction, and sustainable practices, the company is making a positive impact on the well-being of individuals and the planet.

In a world where quality sleep is increasingly valued, The Sleep Company stands out as a pioneer and leader. With its revolutionary SmartGRID technology, expanding product portfolio, and global aspirations, the brand is poised to reshape the sleep industry and bring comfort and rejuvenation to people around the world. As more individuals discover the transformative power of a good night's sleep, The Sleep Company will continue to be at the forefront of innovation, providing solutions that redefine the way we rest and recharge.

Zigly Targets 60 Petcare Centres by FY27

As India's pet care industry evolves from fragmented services to organized ecosystems, Zigly Petcare is building an omnichannel model that combines veterinary care, grooming, retail, and digital convenience under one roofIndia's pet care industry is undergoing a structural transformation. Rising pet ownership, increasing awareness around preventive healthcare, premium nutrition, and grooming are reshaping how consumers care for their pets. At the same time, organized players are stepping in to address longstanding gaps in the market by creating integrated ecosystems rather than standalone pet stores.

Among the brands riding this wave is Zigly, which has rapidly expanded its footprint since launching in 2021. Today, the company operates 46 centres across 19 cities, offering veterinary services, diagnostics, surgeries, grooming, and retail under a single roof, while complementing its offline presence with an omnichannel strategy.

> "Zigly came with the promise that we can offer everything and be with pet parents throughout their parenting journey," expressed Saurabh Jain, CEO, Zigly.

Building an Integrated Pet Care Ecosystem

Unlike traditional pet shops or standalone veterinary clinics, Zigly has positioned itself as a one-stop destination for pet parents. Each of its centres houses veterinary OPDs, diagnostics, X-ray facilities, surgeries, grooming salons, spas, and retail shelves stocked with more than 1,500 SKUs, allowing consumers to access multiple services in one visit. The company leverages its integrated ecosystem to address the needs of a rapidly growing base of first-time pet owners.

> "Nearly 67 percent of pet parents today are first-time pet parents. They need guidance. They need consultation. They want someone they can trust. That gives us a unique advantage of being able to guide them whether it is products, grooming or vet care," shared Jain.

The company believes that pet care differs fundamentally from human healthcare, where services are often fragmented across different providers, and aims to simplify the entire pet parenting journey by offering everything under one roof.

Strengthening Retail Presence Across India

Today, Zigly has a presence across major markets including Delhi NCR, Chandigarh, Jaipur, Lucknow, Indore, Ahmedabad, Pune, Mumbai, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, and several cities across Punjab.

"We are opening two centres on an average every month and plan to reach around 60-65 centres by the end of this financial year," said Jain.

Looking ahead, the company plans to deepen its presence within existing cities while selectively entering new ones.

> "We have done two transactions last year, and this year we are quite determined to execute multiple partnerships with existing clinics, hospitals and vets," he added.

Omnichannel Is Driving the Next Phase of Growth

While physical centres remain central to the brand experience, digital commerce has become an equally important growth engine.

Today, online contributes nearly 22-25 percent of Zigly's overall revenue through its website, marketplaces such as Amazon and Flipkart, and quick commerce platforms including Zepto and Swiggy Instamart.

> "Our centres also act as fulfilment centres. Our presence across 19 cities makes us close to our customers even if they choose to interact with us online," Jain explained.

The company also plans to further strengthen its online business to unlock new growth opportunities.

> "Quick commerce has made life easy for customers. Online is a massive opportunity because customers increasingly come there for repeat purchases and fulfilment," he added.

Beyond commerce, Zigly is expanding its digital healthcare offerings through teleconsultation and Vet-at-Home services.

Changing Consumer Behaviour Is Fueling Demand

As India's pet ownership ecosystem matures, Jain sees clear shifts in consumer behaviour.

The first is a growing preference for convenience.

> "Pet parents today are seeking convenience and simplicity. Wherever they find that and are able to trust that place, they stay with that brand," shared Jain.

Preventive healthcare is another trend reshaping the industry.

> "Pet parents are no longer waiting for something to happen to the pet before visiting a doctor. They are following vaccination schedules, reading product labels and learning about what is good for their pets," noted Jain.

Professional grooming is also emerging as one of the fastest-growing service categories. Interestingly, demand is no longer confined to metro cities, with Tier-II markets such as Jaipur, Lucknow, Indore, and cities across Punjab witnessing robust growth.

Looking Beyond Pet Food

Although food continues to account for the largest share of sales, Zigly is witnessing rapid growth across premium nutrition and lifestyle categories.

> "Dry food remains the largest category, but we are seeing much faster growth in wet food and nutritional food," noted Jain.

The company is also betting heavily on accessories.

> "Accessories such as collars, leashes, harnesses and lifestyle products are replicating the kind of growth we saw in kids' accessories. People want to do more for their pets and pamper them," he added.

To strengthen its product portfolio, Zigly has developed four private labels covering pet food, grooming products, cat care, and lifestyle accessories, with wellness remaining the common thread across all launches.

Giving Back Through the Zigly Foundation

Alongside commercial expansion, Zigly is investing in community initiatives through the Zigly Foundation.

The company recently partnered with the Government of Delhi and municipal bodies to vaccinate and microchip over 5,000 street dogs, while also launching Zigly Cares, a dedicated food range for stray dogs.

> "We are very proud of the work we do for street dogs and for the animal community at large," Jain said.

Long-Term Vision

Looking ahead, Zigly plans to double its business in FY27. Backed by aggressive retail expansion, omnichannel growth, acquisitions, digital healthcare initiatives, and an expanding portfolio of private-label products, the company is positioning itself as much more than a pet retailer.

> "Zigly is at an inflection point in the pet care industry. We are there for anxious pet parents throughout their pet parenting journey by offering everything under one roof. The opportunities in India's pet care ecosystem are massive, and I believe the next 10 years will be the golden decade for the industry," concluded Jain.

Inside Brandman Retail's Playbook for Premium Global Brands

BY - Rishabh Sharma

As Indian consumers increasingly embrace premium global brands, retailers are rethinking how international labels establish and grow in the country. Rising disposable incomes, growing interest in fitness and wellness, and wider digital access have accelerated demand for global athleisure brands beyond metropolitan markets. In response, Brandman Retail has evolved from a brand distribution company into an integrated platform spanning retail, e-commerce, B2B distribution, marketing, and consumer engagement, helping international brands build a long-term presence in India.

Building an Ecosystem for Premium Brands

For Brandman Retail, introducing a global brand to India is only the starting point. The company focuses on building long-term partnerships that help brands grow while adapting to the needs of Indian consumers.

Kashika Malhotra, Director, Brandman Retail Limited, said the company's role has expanded significantly since its inception, with the focus shifting from distribution to creating a complete retail ecosystem.

> "Brandman Retail was established with the vision of bringing premium global brands closer to the Indian consumer as the Indian consumer continues to evolve. Over the years, we've evolved from brand distribution to a more integrated system. We do brand acquisition, retail, e-commerce, B2B distribution along with marketing and consumer engagement. Our long-term vision is to build India's premium lifestyle hub that brands can trust for sustainable, scalable growth."

Rather than acting as a conventional distributor, the company now works with international partners to localise retail strategies while maintaining each brand's global identity.

Building on India's Athleisure Boom

Athleisure remains at the core of Brandman Retail's business strategy. As fitness and wellness become a larger part of consumers' lifestyles, the company has steadily expanded its portfolio to cater to growing demand for premium performance and lifestyle brands.

Beginning with New Balance in 2021, Brandman Retail has since added brands such as Saucony, ANTA, and Wilson, creating a portfolio that caters to different sporting and lifestyle needs.

> "Globally, we're seeing the rise of athleisure. We started with New Balance in 2021 with three stores, and today have approximately 20 stores. We've also expanded into brands like Saucony, ANTA, and Wilson to diversify our portfolio as more consumers adopt fitness and wellness."

The company has also introduced Sneakrz, a multi-brand retail concept designed to bring together premium athleisure brands under one roof.

> "We've launched Sneakrz as a multi-brand store with all our in-house brands along with Adidas, Puma and ASICS. Our vision is to become a one-stop destination for premium athleisure where consumers can find the right footwear for every sport and activity."

Growth Beyond Metropolitan India

While premium brands have traditionally focused on major cities, Brandman Retail believes the next wave of growth will come from Tier II and Tier III markets, where consumer aspirations are changing rapidly.

According to Malhotra, stronger purchasing power, digital adoption, and greater exposure to international brands have created significant opportunities beyond metropolitan India.

> "One of the biggest shifts we've seen is the rise of disposable income along with increasing demand for premium global brands. We strongly believe in the growth of Tier II and Tier III markets. Our store in Lucknow performs as well as our stores in Delhi NCR, showing that demand for premium brands is expanding beyond metros."

The company continues to strengthen its omnichannel presence while tailoring marketing initiatives to local audiences without compromising the positioning of its international brand partners.

> "Consumers are more connected than ever through technology and globalisation. We continue expanding our digital capabilities and retail footprint while adapting our marketing to resonate with local consumers without losing the premium global essence of every brand."

Data, Technology, and Long-Term Partnerships

As Brandman Retail continues to expand, technology has become central to how it manages operations and makes business decisions. From inventory planning and customer relationship management to omnichannel commerce, the company relies on data to understand consumer preferences across regions and improve operational efficiency.

> "Technology has always been a big part of our business. We use it to manage inventory across all our stores and e-commerce platforms, giving us one network to track products and understand what sells in different parts of the country. India is a very diverse market and technology helps us make better decisions."

Malhotra believes data has also strengthened the company's partnerships with global brands by enabling more informed expansion strategies.

> "The global brands that we work with are long-term partnerships that we value deeply. We work closely with them to understand their global vision and India's potential, and then find a middle ground where we can grow the brand sustainably without diluting its identity. Every decision we make is backed by data and market insights."

!nstead of chasing rapid expansion, the company focuses on identifying the right locations, building brand awareness gradually, and creating sustainable retail growth.

The Next Phase of Growth

Following its IPO earlier this year, Brandman Retail is now preparing for its next stage of expansion. Alongside strengthening its existing portfolio, the company is entering licensed manufacturing through Rockport while continuing to expand its retail footprint across key markets.

> "We recently signed a licensing deal with Rockport and have the license to manufacture the products in India under the Rockport brand. It aligns well with the Make in India initiative, and we believe it creates an exciting opportunity for us while strengthening our premium footwear portfolio."

The company is also accelerating store expansion after overcoming regulatory delays and plans to deepen its omnichannel presence while entering new markets across the country.

Looking ahead, Malhotra said the ambition extends beyond operating stores to becoming the preferred growth partner for premium international brands entering India.

> "If I'm looking at the next three to five years, our vision is to establish Brandman as India's preferred platform for premium international brands. We want to build a diversified portfolio, expand across key markets, and continue investing in innovation and technology to deliver better consumer and retail experiences."

As India's premium retail market evolves, Brandman Retail is positioning itself as more than a market-entry partner for international labels. By combining local market expertise, technology-led decision-making, and long-term brand partnerships, the company is building a platform designed to help global brands establish sustainable growth in India while responding to the changing expectations of the country's increasingly aspirational consumers.

Insight Cosmetics Plans Deeper Penetration in Tier II & III Cities, Eyes to Expand to 60,000 Stores in 2 Years

India's beauty industry is evolving rapidly as consumers seek products that combine performance, safety, affordability, and innovation. Amid this transformation, Insight Cosmetics has quietly built one of the country's strongest omnichannel beauty businesses. What began over 30 years ago with nail polish has grown into a diversified cosmetics portfolio spanning makeup, skincare, fragrances, and more, supported by an extensive retail network and in-house manufacturing,

> "Our mission has always been making premium-quality beauty products accessible to every Indian consumer without compromising on safety or affordability," expressed Mihir Jain, Sales and Marketing Director, Insight Cosmetics.

Democratizing Beauty for Every Consumer

Insight Cosmetics was founded with the belief that quality beauty products should not be limited to premium price segments. Starting from a small region in Maharashtra, the company has steadily expanded its reach across India and today is present in more than 35,000 retail stores, alongside major e-commerce platforms.

> "Our goal has always been to democratize beauty by offering high-quality products backed by strong research and development while maintaining affordability," shared Jain.

Its product portfolio has evolved significantly over the years. While the brand initially focused on nail polish, it now offers products across face, lips, eyes, fragrances, and skincare, allowing it to cater to a much wider consumer base.

A significant milestone came two years ago when Insight Cosmetics became India's first toxic-free beauty brand certified by Bureau Veritas, reinforcing its focus on product safety and consumer trust.

Building a Omnichannel Beauty Brand

Despite the rapid growth of online beauty shopping, physical retail remains central to Insight Cosmetics' strategy.

The company has built an extensive omnichannel presence through beauty counters, cosmetic stores, modern trade outlets, shopping malls, and general trade retailers. Today, it operates through over 35,000 retail stores, more than 360 modern trade outlets, and has a presence in over 25 malls across the country.

> "Retail is extremely important because consumers want to touch, feel and test cosmetics before making a purchase," shared Jain

Offline retail continues to dominate the company's business, contributing nearly 65 percent of total revenue, while online channels account for the remaining 35 percent.

Tier II and Tier III Cities Drive the Next Phase of Growth

Looking ahead, Insight Cosmetics plans to significantly strengthen its retail presence beyond metropolitan markets.

The company aims to expand its distribution network to more than 60,000 retail stores within the next two years, with particular emphasis on emerging cities where demand for quality beauty products continues to grow.

> "We see significant opportunities in expanding across Tier II and Tier III cities while continuing to strengthen consumer experiences," expressed Jain.

Alongside retail expansion, the company is also investing in experiential shopping through mall presence, allowing consumers to discover and test products before purchasing.

The Rise of Skincare-Infused Makeup

Changing consumer preferences are shaping Insight Cosmetics' innovation pipeline.

Rather than treating skincare and makeup as separate categories, the company is increasingly focusing on hybrid beauty products that combine cosmetic performance with skincare benefits. Upcoming launches will feature formulations enriched with skincare ingredients while offering long-lasting wear, waterproof performance, and inclusive shade ranges.

> "Many of our upcoming launches will integrate skincare ingredients into makeup formulations," shared Jain.

!nsight Cosmetics also sees growing demand for non-transfer lipsticks, hydrating lip colors, skin tints, and other multifunctional products that align with evolving consumer expectations. Fragrance is another category receiving increased attention, with plans to further expand the existing portfolio.

Science-Led Innovation at the Core

> "We have more than 35 in-house scientists, beauty researchers and formulation experts evaluating every ingredient that goes into our products," shared Jain.

Research and development remain one of the company's strongest differentiators.

Insight Cosmetics employs over 35 in-house scientists and formulation experts who oversee product development, ingredient selection, and quality evaluation. Every product undergoes extensive dermatological and ophthalmological testing where applicable, ensuring safety and efficacy before reaching consumers.

Transparency has become increasingly important as consumers become more ingredient-conscious, and the company positions itself as a safe beauty brand backed by validated product claims and rigorous testing standards.

Manufacturing Built Around Quality

Unlike many beauty brands that outsource manufacturing, Insight Cosmetics produces all of its products in-house. The company operates two manufacturing facilities in Maharashtra, located in Vasai and Ghoisa, supported by multiple warehouses and stringent quality-control processes.

Product development begins with research and formulation before ingredients are sourced from leading suppliers across the United States, Germany, Japan, and Taiwan.

> "Every product undergoes a development cycle of approximately 12 to 18 months before reaching the market," said Jain.

Each product is subjected to technical quality assessments as well as practical evaluations by a team of 12 in-house makeup artists. Selected products are also tested with consumers in smaller markets before being introduced nationally, ensuring valuable real-world feedback is incorporated into the final offering.

Innovation Meets Digital Discovery

Beyond product development, Insight Cosmetics is also investing heavily in digital engagement. Creator-led discovery, influencer collaborations, and social media platforms play an increasingly important role in helping the company understand consumer behavior while introducing new products to younger audiences.

The insights gathered from these platforms are helping shape future product development, particularly in rapidly evolving beauty categories.

> "Social media and creator-led platforms help us understand emerging trends and changing consumer preferences," expressed Jain.

The Road Ahead

Over the next three to five years, Insight Cosmetics plans to deepen its presence across categories where it currently has lower market share, particularly eye makeup and nail products, while expanding into newer product segments.

With continued investments in retail expansion, product innovation, manufacturing capabilities, digital engagement, and customer experience, the company aims to build a truly omnichannel beauty ecosystem that remains true to its founding philosophy—making quality beauty accessible to every Indian consumer.

> "Our vision is to establish Insight Cosmetics as one of India's most trusted beauty brands across innovation, quality and accessibility," concluded Jain.

How Mayavé Is Building India's Next Global Jewellery Brand

BY - Richa Fulara
Features Writer
Jun 26, 2026 / 1 MIN READ

Follow Us

As India's jewellery industry enters a new era, legacy players are reinventing retail through immersive store formats, omnichannel strategies and design-led brand identities. For Dravya Dholakia, CEO, Mayavé Jewellery, a lab-grown diamond brand under Dholakia Retail, the future of jewellery retail lies not just in selling products but in creating memorable consumer experiences.

The Indian jewellery industry is witnessing a structural shift. While trust, craftsmanship and legacy continue to define the category, changing consumer preferences and the rapid rise of lab-grown diamonds are encouraging brands to rethink conventional retail formats.

For Dholakia Lab Grown Diamonds Pvt. Ltd. (DLGD), this evolution has resulted in the launch of Mayavé Jewellery, an omnichannel lab-grown diamond brand that marks the company's foray into experiential consumer retail.

> "We're trying to build a jewellery brand from India that we can eventually take to the world," said Dravya Dholakia, CEO, Mayavé Jewellery. "While we come from a legacy business, the thinking and culture we've built are completely fresh because today's consumer is very different. They think differently, their expectations are different, and the experience they seek is different."

Retail Is No Longer Just About Selling Jewellery

According to Dholakia, the next phase of jewellery retail will be defined by customer experience rather than product display alone.

Traditional jewellery stores have largely followed the same format for decades—long counters, dense showcases and transactional selling. However, younger consumers increasingly expect retail environments that are immersive, personalised and aligned with global luxury standards.

> "We want to bring a different flavour to how jewellery is sold in India," Dholakia explained. "Buying jewellery is one of the most significant purchases in a person's life, yet the experience often lacks privacy and emotional engagement."

To address this, Mayavé is creating larger, experience-led stores where customers can explore collections in a relaxed environment. A typical 2,200-2,500 sq. ft. Mayavé store will house inventory comparable to a conventional jewellery outlet occupying almost half the space, allowing for wider layouts, greater privacy and richer storytelling.

> "The first impression should feel less like a jewellery store and more like a museum. That's the kind of experience we're trying to create," he added.

Omnichannel Is the New Standard

While digital commerce has become an essential part of retail, Dholakia believes jewellery remains a category where physical stores will continue to play a pivotal role.

> "Digital has become a default in today's time," he noted. "You have to be digital whether you're digital-first or offline-first. But we're going very aggressive on offline retail while maintaining a strong online presence."

Mayavé has been conceived as an omnichannel business with physical retail at its core.

According to Dholakia, the nature of jewellery purchasing makes offline retail indispensable.

> "When consumers are spending Rs 50,000, Rs 1 lakh or more, they want to touch it, wear it and experience it. Jewellery has always been an emotional purchase. People bring their families and friends, seek opinions and enjoy the buying journey. We don't see offline retail disappearing in this category," he observed.

Building a 100-Store Retail Network

Backing its retail-first philosophy is an ambitious expansion strategy.

Mayavé plans to launch its first stores in the NCR region before expanding across India, with a target of opening over 100 stores within the next two-and-a-half to three years. The initial rollout will consist primarily of company-owned outlets, followed by a franchise partnership model.

> "We've spent nearly two years preparing before launch because we didn't want to rush," Dholakia said. "Now that we're ready, we'll scale at full speed."

The company also views increasing competition in the lab-grown diamond segment as a positive indicator.

> "We're actually excited to see more brands entering the category because it validates that we're in the right space at the right time," he added.

Design as the Biggest Differentiator

While affordability has helped fuel the growth of lab-grown diamonds, Dholakia believes design will ultimately separate successful brands from the rest.

Instead of focusing primarily on bridal jewellery, Mayavé is positioning itself around contemporary everyday luxury, with collections featuring innovative cuts, colours and settings developed under the guidance of a Milan-based creative director with more than two decades of experience.

> "Gold is gold and diamonds are diamonds," Dholakia remarked. "What ultimately differentiates one brand from another is design."

The brand's offerings begin at around Rs 30,000-35,000, extend to exclusive creations priced above Rs 20 lakh, with the majority of its assortment positioned in the Rs 80,000 to Rs 1 lakh range.

One Brand Cannot Cater to Everyone

Dholakia also expects jewellery retail to become increasingly segmented as younger consumers develop distinct preferences and shopping behaviours.

> "There can't be one brand catering to everyone," he pointed out. "Different consumers have different aspirations, budgets and lifestyles. That's why you'll continue to see greater segmentation across jewellery retail."

This philosophy has also shaped Dholakia Lab Grown Diamonds Pvt. Ltd.'s (DLGD) broader strategy of developing multiple brands to cater to different consumer segments and shopping occasions.

Lab-Grown Diamonds Are Creating a New Consumer Base

Despite ongoing comparisons with natural diamonds, Dholakia believes the two categories will coexist rather than compete directly.

> "Less than one percent of India's population has experienced diamonds," he said. "It's not that the remaining population doesn't aspire to own them. For many consumers, affordability has simply been the barrier. Lab-grown diamonds make that aspiration accessible to a much larger audience."

Rather than replacing natural diamonds, he believes lab-grown diamonds will significantly expand the overall jewellery market by attracting first-time buyers.

The Next Chapter in Jewellery Retail

As India's jewellery market evolves, the focus is steadily shifting from transactional retail to experience-driven engagement. Larger stores, omnichannel integration, differentiated design and sharper consumer segmentation are emerging as the key pillars of future growth.

For Dholakia, however, the ambition extends well beyond India's borders.

> "Nobody has taken an Indian jewellery brand and built it into a global luxury name," he concluded. "That opportunity excites us. We believe India has everything it takes to build a world-class jewellery brand, and that's what we're working towards."

Sepoy & Co. Plans Nationwide Retail Expansion, Targets 100 Pc YoY Growth

As premiumisation reshapes India's alcobev landscape, mixer brands are emerging as critical players in the drinking experience. At the forefront of this shift is Sepoy & Co., the Delhi-born premium mixer company betting on flavour innovation, quick commerce, and evolving consumption habits to build a global Indian brand.

The brand was born when founder Angad Soni realised that while India was witnessing the rise of craft spirits and premium gin labels, quality mixers remained conspicuously absent.

> "People were literally bringing tonic waters back from Europe because there wasn't an Indian option that matched international standards. That's when we realised there was an opportunity to build a world-class mixer brand from India," said Angad Soni, Founder, Sepoy & Co.

Founded in 2018 and produced in the Himalayan foothills of Uttarakhand, Sepoy & Co. was built on three non-negotiable principles: natural ingredients, low-calorie formulations, and uncompromising quality standards. The company deliberately chose premium glass packaging over cans, signalling its ambition to create a sophisticated beverage brand rather than just another mass-market soft drink.

Premiumisation Is No Longer Limited to Spirits

India's premiumisation story has largely revolved around spirits such as gin, tequila, and craft whiskies. However, the next wave of growth is increasingly extending to the mixers that accompany them.

> "One of the biggest misconceptions is that consumers are drinking less. In India, consumers aren't reducing consumption—they're becoming significantly more selective about what they drink. People are looking for flavour, quality, and experiences, and mixers have become an important part of that premium occasion," shared Soni.

This behavioural shift is driving demand for natural, flavour-led, and low-calorie products that can elevate simple serves into curated drinking experiences. Consumers increasingly expect the same level of quality from mixers that they demand from spirits, particularly as at-home cocktail culture gains momentum.

Building Products Around Consumption Occasions

Sepoy & Co. has responded by building one of India's most extensive premium mixer portfolios. Its range includes multiple tonic variants, ginger mixers, sparkling lemonades, premium sodas, and sparkling waters, each designed around specific spirits and flavour pairings.

> "We don't think about products in isolation. We think about occasions and pairings. A single bottle of gin can become multiple drinking experiences depending on the mixer consumers choose," said Soni.

The company has also launched products such as Yuzu Jalapeño Soda and Pink Grapefruit Soda to complement the growing popularity of tequila and agave-based cocktails in India. This approach reflects a broader retail trend in which consumers increasingly seek customisation, experimentation, and flavour discovery.

Role of quick commerce

Quick commerce plays a pivotal role in Sepoy & Co.'s retail strategy. The company is projecting 80-100 percent growth this financial year, driven by rising consumer adoption and expanding distribution across instant-delivery platforms.

> "Following our appearance on Shark Tank India Season 5, we recorded our highest-ever quick-commerce sales in March 2026 and then broke that record again in April. It demonstrated that premium mixers are moving from niche products to mainstream consumption," said Soni.

Quick commerce is also accelerating the democratisation of premium beverage experiences, enabling consumers across smaller cities and emerging lifestyle markets to access products that were once restricted to premium bars and metropolitan retailers.

Identifying Future Trends

Innovation has been central to Sepoy & Co.'s strategy since inception. The company entered the premium lemonade category before it existed in India and later introduced flavour-forward sodas in anticipation of the rise of tequila-led serves.

> "Our philosophy has always been to identify future drinking occasions before they become mainstream. Products like Yuzu Jalapeño Soda and Pink Grapefruit Soda were built because we saw the agave movement coming," highlighted Soni.

The company is now exploring categories such as Espresso Tonics and Matcha Tonics, allowing it to participate in café culture, wellness-led consumption, and premium non-alcoholic occasions. It also sees significant opportunities in premium vodka pairings as Indian consumers increasingly gravitate toward lighter and cleaner drinking experiences.

Global Ambitions, Local Roots

Having already expanded into markets including the UAE, Singapore, the UK, and Italy, Sepoy & Co. now has its sights set on becoming India's definitive global mixer brand.

> "Our vision is simple but ambitious—to be present at every bar that matters, whether that's a consumer's bar at home, a favourite restaurant, a luxury hotel, or a cocktail destination anywhere in the world," said Soni.

The company's future growth strategy is built around deepening hospitality partnerships, strengthening quick-commerce capabilities, accelerating retail expansion across India, expanding internationally, and continuing to innovate around emerging consumer preferences.

> "Ultimately, we don't want to simply sell mixers. We want to shape how consumers drink, entertain, and experience beverages in India and beyond," concluded Soni.

Launched in June 2022, Chupps began to address a significant gap in India's open footwear market. While affordable products priced below Rs 400 account for nearly 70-75 percent of the country's open footwear segment, there was a lack of stylish, comfortable, and high-quality offerings in the mid-premium price bracket.

Post-Covid, open footwear has evolved from being merely 'ghar ka chappal' to becoming a socially accepted fashion and lifestyle category, worn for activities ranging from movie outings and social gatherings to pre- and post-sport recovery.

> "Chupps was created to cater to this growing demand by offering premium-quality slides and sandals at accessible price points. Our products range from Rs 600 to Rs 2,500, with our sweet spot around Rs 1,100," shared Yashesh Mukhi, Founder, Chupps Footwear.

The brand also differentiates itself through sustainability, offering fully biodegradable footwear that decomposes within two to four years in landfill conditions, helping address the issue of plastic waste and landfill pollution.

Product Offerings

Chupps introduces around 20-25 new styles every month while phasing out underperforming products. Initially focused solely on men's footwear, the brand has since expanded into women's and kids' categories, creating products for the entire family.

The company has recently entered the sandals category, particularly backstrap sandals, an underserved segment in the Indian market. Chupps plans to introduce nearly 50 SKUs in this category.

Additionally, the brand is launching comfortable home footwear, open footwear suitable for colder climates, and functional innovations such as Quick Dry Technology and Massage Footbeds.

> "Quick Dry Technology offers 90 percent water resistance and allows the footwear to dry completely within two to three minutes. Our Massage Footbeds are designed with ventilation channels that improve airflow and provide a massaging effect for enhanced comfort," explained Mukhi.

However, the company does not intend to enter the closed footwear or shoes category in the near future and will continue focusing on opportunities within the open footwear segment.

Expansion Plans

Chupps has already signed a few store locations and is actively scouting for more. The brand plans to open around 15 stores this year and aims to reach approximately 50-60 retail stores across India over the next three years.

Currently, the company operates through more than 30 distributors and has a presence in over 3,000 footwear stores nationwide. It is also available across more than 500 modern retail and large-format retail stores and operates one exclusive store at R City Mall, Mumbai. Online, the brand retails through marketplaces as well as its own website.

> "Offline sales contribute nearly two-thirds of our revenues, while the remaining comes from online channels," said Mukhi.

Differentiating in the Market

Chupps places a strong emphasis on customer-centric product development and innovation. One of its key differentiators is its proprietary rubberized foaming technology, which makes the products anti-slip, lightweight, and highly durable.

Another major differentiator is sustainability. The company claims to be the only footwear brand in India currently offering fully biodegradable products.

Its continuous innovation in comfort, functionality, and styling through features such as Quick Dry Technology and Massage Footbeds further strengthens its positioning in the market.

> "We believe our combination of premium product quality, innovation, sustainability, and affordable pricing creates a strong competitive advantage," said Mukhi.

Long-Term Vision

Chupps aims to become one of the leading brands in India's open footwear category over the next three years. The company sees significant opportunities to introduce new categories and premium products within the open footwear segment and believes there is considerable whitespace in the market.

From a business perspective, the company is targeting a topline revenue of around Rs 400-500 crore over the next three years.

> "We aim to transition from being perceived solely as a product-led company to becoming a strong, purpose-driven brand that consistently delivers innovative and sustainable footwear solutions," concluded Mukhi.

Founded by Aditi Murarka Agrawal and Anurag Agrawal, Nestasia was born from a shared passion for creating beautiful and meaningful living spaces. While working in Singapore and later in Hong Kong, the couple moved homes several times across Southeast Asia and set up three homes from scratch within just two years. During this experience, they discovered their love for curating spaces and thoroughly enjoyed selecting products that reflected their personal style and transformed houses into homes.

This passion inspired them to return to India and establish Nestasia—an exciting destination for all things home. Their vision was to create a brand that seamlessly blends functionality, aesthetics, and contemporary design, helping people build homes that are a true reflection of their identities.

At the heart of Nestasia's journey is a strong commitment to sustainability and ethical business practices. The company incorporates eco-friendly materials and processes, including upcycling fabric scraps for packaging, underscoring its dedication to responsible innovation and the artisans who bring its creations to life.

> Today, Nestasia is not only a successful home and lifestyle brand but also a vibrant community of customers who value thoughtful design and elevated living," expressed Aditi Murarka Agrawal, Co-Founder, Nestasia.

Retail Presence

Nestasia has significantly expanded its offline footprint, operating 14 stores across nine major Indian cities and creating a seamless omnichannel experience for consumers. The brand has established a strong presence in Noida, Bengaluru, Hyderabad, and Pune, with additional stores in Kolkata, Gurugram, Delhi, Chandigarh, and Dehradun.

> "Our retail touchpoints reflect our commitment to moving beyond e-commerce and offering customers an elevated, immersive home-shopping experience," says Aditi Murarka Agrawal, Co-Founder, Nestasia.

Expansion Plans

Nestasia is strategically strengthening its offline presence across key Tier I cities, reinforcing its omnichannel model that combines digital convenience with immersive physical retail experiences. The expansion aims to make its contemporary home and lifestyle collections more accessible to consumers across India.

> "By deepening our physical presence, we continue to bridge the gap between aspirational design and everyday utility, ensuring that our philosophy of 'making everyday living feel special' reaches more homes across India," says Agrawal.

Product Offerings and Diversification

Nestasia aspires to become the ultimate one-stop destination for modern home setups and makeovers. While the brand has built a strong foundation in design-led tableware, kitchen essentials, home décor, and soft furnishings, it is now entering a new phase of growth by scaling its existing categories and strategically expanding into new lifestyle segments.

> "Our goal is to become a comprehensive lifestyle destination that accompanies our customers through every stage of their home-styling journey, empowering them to create spaces that are not only functional but also a true reflection of their identity," adds Agrawal.

Growth Targets and Long-Term Vision

Having served over one million consumers, Nestasia's next ambition is to reach 10 million households and become India's most loved home, kitchen, and lifestyle brand. As it continues to scale, the company remains committed to being a design-led brand that thoughtfully integrates technology to deliver meaningful, seamless, and enriching consumer experiences while staying true to its customer-first philosophy.

Through backward integration and greater ownership of its supply chain, Nestasia aims to strengthen every aspect of its business—from product innovation and craftsmanship to quality control and functionality.

> “Our vision is not only to meet global benchmarks but to consistently exceed them, delivering thoughtfully designed products that bring world-class quality and exceptional value to Indian homes,” concluded Agrawal.

Plush Targets Offline Presence in 25 Cities, Expands into New Categories

Founded by Ketan Munoth and Prince Kapoor seven years ago, Plush has emerged as one of India's leading online-first menstrual hygiene brands with a growing presence across the country. Before commercialising the business, the founders spent nearly two years on research and development to create products that effectively address period rashes and improve menstrual comfort.

> "The brand started as a period-care company focused on sanitary napkins and has since evolved into a women's health and wellness brand, expanding into categories such as hair removal and intimate wellness," said Ketan Munoth, Co-Founder, Plush.

Strengthening Retail Presence

Initially, Plush adopted a balanced approach towards both online and offline channels. However, the pandemic prompted the brand to shift its focus towards digital platforms such as Amazon and Flipkart, driven by stronger customer reach, direct engagement opportunities, and improved distribution efficiencies. Over the past few years, the company has also expanded into quick commerce while simultaneously reviving its offline growth strategy.

> "Plush currently has an offline presence across around 12 cities. The brand has a stronger foothold in six major metro cities, including Bengaluru, Chennai, Hyderabad, Delhi and Mumbai. Recently, we have expanded into cities such as Ludhiana and Kochi and plan to continue entering newer markets," explained Munoth.

The brand's offline footprint has grown significantly, with the number of retail accounts increasing to around 2,500 stores from nearly 1,000 a year ago. Despite this rapid offline expansion, online channels continue to contribute the majority of Plush's revenue. The company also views quick commerce as a hybrid model that combines the advantages of both online convenience and offline accessibility.

Expansion Plans and New Categories

Plush aims to strengthen product availability and distribution to drive repeat purchases and improve accessibility. Over the next year, the company plans to deepen its presence in its existing 12 cities by expanding its store footprint. Over the next two to three years, it aims to nearly double its offline presence, taking its reach to approximately 25 cities while also improving delivery speed through its direct-to-consumer platform.

The company is also focused on expanding its portfolio within the women's health and wellness segment. It recently launched a maternity range comprising maternity pads and maternity period panties.

> "We plan to expand further into intimate hygiene products and are working on solutions focused on intimate freshness and cleanliness. Additionally, Plush is preparing to launch deodorants, including intimate hygiene deodorants and underarm deodorants," shared Munoth.

Standing Out in the Market

Plush positions itself as a performance-driven brand centred on comfort and convenience. From product design and packaging to digital interactions, the company focuses on creating positive experiences across every consumer touchpoint.

> "These attributes help us stand out in the period care space," said Munoth.

IntrCity Smart Bus Partnership

Recently, Plush announced its partnership with IntrCity Smart Bus under its initiative, 'Map The Gap. Period.', which aims to improve menstrual hygiene accessibility. The initiative was born from a simple observation: women often lack access to period products while travelling, particularly during long-distance journeys.

Through this partnership, women travelling on IntrCity buses across South India receive period care kits containing sanitary pads, stickers, and a curated playlist designed to make the travel experience more comfortable.

The brand now plans to expand the initiative to additional locations. It is currently in discussions with several airport authorities and has already partnered with Marina Mall and Ampa Skywalk in Chennai, as well as Sky City Mall in Mumbai.

> "Plush wants to identify places where menstrual hygiene products are not easily accessible and bridge those gaps. Based on feedback received through social media, we identified airports, stadiums and malls as spaces where accessibility remains limited. A dedicated team is working on expanding partnerships to make period products available in such locations," highlighted Munoth.

Long-Term Vision

Plush is witnessing strong customer advocacy and high repeat purchase rates. The company aims to strengthen its position as a women's health and wellness brand by expanding into new categories, reaching more consumers, and further growing its distribution network.

> "We are currently transitioning from a '10 to 100' growth journey and are strengthening our leadership team to support this next phase of expansion," concluded Munoth.

Recode Studios Plans to Open 8-12 Kiosks in Metro Cities by the End of This Year

Founded by Dheeraj Bansal and Rahul Sachdeva in 2018, Recode Studios is a colour cosmetics brand known for offering premium-quality products at accessible price points. Initially launched as an offline brand in Central India, the company pivoted to an online-first model during the pandemic. Alongside its digital expansion, the brand introduced self-grooming masterclasses for aspiring makeup artists and college students.

> "These sessions allowed consumers to experience our products firsthand while learning makeup techniques. In 2023, we gained significant visibility through our appearance on Shark Tank India, even though we did not secure funding. More recently, we became a publicly listed company," shared Dheeraj Bansal, Co-Founder, Recode Studios.

Highest-Selling Categories

Face makeup remains Recode Studios' strongest category, with products such as primers, foundations, concealers, and other face-preparation products contributing significantly to sales.

"Our strongest category is face makeup. Products such as primers, face preparation products, foundations, and concealers are our biggest contributors. Face cosmetics remain the most visible and important segment in our portfolio," said Bansal.

Retail Presence Across India

Recode Studios has built a pan-India presence and is available in most cities with populations exceeding 200,000–300,000. Its footprint spans from Trichy in the south to Udhampur, Jammu, and Srinagar in the north.

"We are present in cities such as Surat, Ahmedabad, Guwahati, Nagpur, Hyderabad, and even in states like Tripura. We also operate franchise stores in select locations," shared Bansal.

Manufacturing Process

Recode Studios follows an asset-light manufacturing model and does not produce products in-house. Instead, it partners with third-party manufacturers and follows stringent quality-control and batch-testing protocols.

"All our products are outsourced. Foundations are produced in Thailand, eyeliners in Taiwan, and kajals in Germany. Packaging is sourced from China. Some products, including a viral foundation, are procured from Mumbai, while certain lipsticks are manufactured in Gurgaon. Our popular Perfect Grip Primer and Perfect Grip Spray are made in Parwanoo, Himachal Pradesh," highlighted Bansal.

Differentiating in a Competitive Market

According to Bansal, Recode Studios identified a market gap where international brands offered superior-quality cosmetics at premium prices, while many domestic alternatives struggled to match those standards.

"We positioned Recode as an affordable luxury brand. Rather than benchmarking ourselves against Indian brands, we compare ourselves directly with international players. Our focus is on delivering global-quality products at more accessible price points," he said.

Competitive Pricing Strategy

The brand's products are often compared with international beauty labels due to similarities in formulation quality while being offered at significantly lower prices.

"Our primer is often compared with Smashbox, which retails at around Rs 3,200, while our version is priced at approximately Rs 1,500. Our foundation is manufactured by the same supplier that produces for Charlotte Tilbury, yet our product is available at around Rs 1,000 compared to Rs 4,500 for similar international offerings," shared Bansal.

Marketing Strategy

While Recode Studios invests in digital advertising across Meta and Google, its masterclass programme remains one of its most effective consumer-acquisition tools.

"Participants pay a fee, receive products worth the same amount, and also enjoy refreshments. Effectively, the class itself becomes free while giving consumers the opportunity to learn makeup and experience our products firsthand. This creates strong product trials and repeat purchases, making it one of our most effective marketing channels," said Bansal.

Collaborations with Makeup Artists

The company also collaborates extensively with makeup academies and professional artists, whose recommendations help drive product adoption.

> "Some notable partners include Manakshi Dutt Makeovers and Guneet Virdi in Delhi, Plush Lounge and Shirdi in Chennai, and Amit Karmakar in West Bengal. Across India, we collaborate with leading makeup artists, academies, and influencers," expressed Bansal.

Expansion Plans and Long-Term Vision

Recode Studios is currently focusing on expanding its Exclusive Brand Outlet (EBO) network through kiosk formats and plans to open between 8 and 12 kiosks during the current financial year, primarily in shopping malls.

> "Our goal is to become the number one colour cosmetics brand in India within the next five years. We are growing at a healthy pace and intend to continue along the same trajectory," concluded Bansal.

Peps Industries Targets Nationwide Expansion, Aims for Rs 1,000 Crore Revenue

India's mattress industry is undergoing a transformation as consumers increasingly prioritize sleep quality, comfort, and wellness. Amid this shift, Peps Industries is charting an ambitious growth path, leveraging its stronghold in South India while expanding its footprint across the country.

Founded over two decades ago, Peps Industries has established itself as one of India's leading spring mattress brands. The company operates under a licensing arrangement with American mattress brand Restonic and has built its reputation on product innovation, technical expertise, and customer satisfaction.

> "Our growth has been driven by continuous product innovation, technical expertise, and a strong focus on customer delight. Positive customer experiences led to strong word-of-mouth recommendations, which played a significant role in building the brand," said Shankar Ramm, Co-Founder and Managing Director of Peps Industries.

Strengthening Retail Presence

While Peps has a presence across multiple regions, South India continues to be its strongest market. The company sees significant opportunities for further growth in the region and is actively expanding its retail network.

> "We currently operate around 135 exclusive stores in South India and plan to increase that number to 200–225 stores by the end of the year," shared Ramm.

The expansion reflects the company's strategy of deepening its market penetration while improving accessibility for consumers seeking premium sleep solutions.

Building Differentiation Through Innovation

In an increasingly competitive mattress market, Peps continues to differentiate itself through its focus on spring mattresses and proprietary product technologies.

The company believes spring mattresses remain the preferred choice globally, with nearly 70 percent of consumers opting for the category. Alongside this, Peps has invested in rubberized coir mattresses and developed patented sag-resistant technologies designed to enhance durability and comfort.

> "Our focus has always been on delivering quality sleep solutions that match customer needs and budgets. Additionally, around 92 percent of our products are biodegradable, which is an important differentiator in today's environmentally conscious market," noted Ramm.

Sustainability and innovation are becoming increasingly important purchasing considerations, particularly among younger consumers seeking products that combine comfort with environmental responsibility.

Expanding Beyond South India

While South India remains a key market, Peps is preparing for a broader national expansion. The company plans to strengthen its presence across western and northern India in the coming months before accelerating growth in eastern markets.

> "Our immediate focus remains South India, where we aim to deepen our presence across districts and smaller markets. Over the next four to five months, we will strengthen our presence in the West and North regions, followed by expansion into the East by the end of the year," explained Ramm.

Rather than focusing exclusively on metropolitan cities, the company sees significant potential in Tier II and Tier III markets, where rising incomes and growing awareness of sleep wellness are creating new demand opportunities.

> "We will identify strong districts within each state and establish a presence there while also creating a smaller footprint in select Tier I cities," he added.

Growth Ambitions and Future Outlook

Peps Industries has set aggressive growth targets for the coming years. The company reported revenues of approximately ₹450–460 crore last year and expects substantial growth as its expansion strategy gains momentum.

> "We expect to reach approximately Rs 630–640 crore this year and Rs 800–850 crore the following year. Our goal is to become a Rs 1,000 crore company within the next few years," said Ramm.

The company believes its combination of retail expansion, product innovation, and market penetration will support its long-term growth ambitions.

From Mattresses to Complete Bedroom Solutions

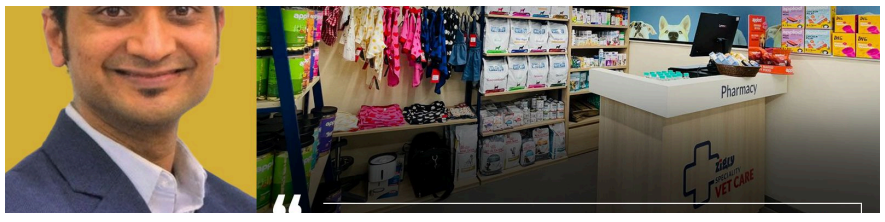

Beyond mattresses, Peps is expanding its portfolio to become a comprehensive bedroom solutions brand. The company is increasingly focusing on accessories such as pillows, mattress protectors, fitted sheets, bed sheets, comforters, blankets, and related products.

> "Many of these products are already available, and we expect the category to grow significantly over the next six to twelve months," said Ramm.

The accessories segment forms part of the company's broader vision of creating a complete sleep ecosystem that addresses multiple consumer needs.

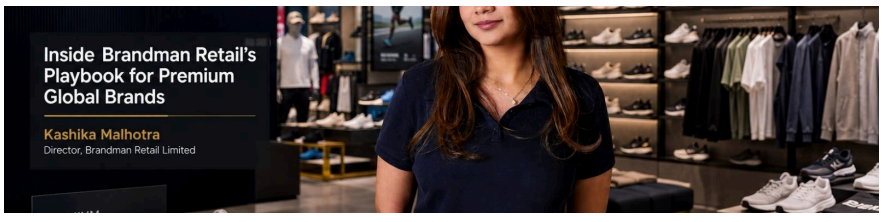

> "Our objective is to create a comprehensive sleep ecosystem where consumers can access high-quality sleep products beyond mattresses. We expect strong momentum in this segment over the coming months and believe it can become an important growth driver for the company," he concluded.
